ARBILL SAFETY'S CEO NAMED TO COMMITTEE OF 200

PHILADELPHIA — Julie Copeland, CEO and President of Arbill Safety, has been named a member of the Committee of 200, a prestigious organization of the most powerful women in business today.

C200 members must meet specific guidelines with regard to their impact on company revenues, and are also judged based on criteria including their position within their company, their scope of influence within their industry, their community leadership skills, and their company's profitability.

C200, which is based in Chicago, is dedicated to fostering growth and increasing opportunities for women entrepreneurs and corporate leaders worldwide. Nearly three-quarters of the members are entrepreneurs; most others are senior executives of major corporations.

"I am thrilled to become a part of an organization that has such a strong history of supporting and encouraging female business leaders," said Ms. Copeland. "I am looking forward to the many ways in which I can contribute to C200's overall mission."

Ms. Copeland has served as CEO and President of Arbill Safety since September 2004. She has been named one of the Women's Business Development Center's "WBE 10 -- Women Who Are Changing America," and was also selected as one of Pennsylvania's Best 50 Women in Business.

Arbill Safety is a North American supplier and manufacturer of safety products and services. As the leader of the business her grandfather started in 1945, Ms. Copeland is dedicated to seeing Arbill continue to grow into a company that provides not only safety products, but safety solutions for today's businesses.

Under Ms. Copeland's leadership, Arbill Safety is quickly becoming a single-source solution for companies that are committed to workplace safety. With an extensive line of quality products, the latest technology to manage supply chain and compliance issues, and a team approach to account management, Arbill provides its customers with complete safety support at an affordable cost.
