Hearing Safety Tip:
If you must raise your voice to speak with someone at arm's length, then the noise is likely at a hazardous level.

Ask your safety manager or direct supervisor to check the noise levels in your workplace, making sure they are below 85dBA.

FEATURED TRAINING PROGRAMS

Industrial Hygiene Noise Monitoring
Our team of Certified Hygienists uses environmental monitoring and analytical methods to detect levels of worker exposure, while also providing the information you need about the links between hygiene and common workplace safety hazards. After identifying the sources of your potential problems, our team puts a customized plan in place to protect your employees.

Hearing Conservation Training and Program Development
Excessively loud workplace environments don't just pose a risk to your workers' eardrums; they threaten their overall safety as noisy environments often lead to other injuries. Arbill's Hearing Conservation consultants identify the noise levels in your facility, design a program to ensure safe exposure for your employees and provide the latest cutting-edge hearing protection technology. This helps you improve workplace safety and comply with OSHA standards.
