Tips for Making Rooftop Safety Your #1 Priority

SHARI CARLOZZI

There is no doubt that OSHA fines have increased over 80% since 2016 due to the continued growth of the construction industry in the United States and the hazards faced daily by construction workers.

The time to create a safety culture in your business is before you hire your first employee, quote your first project, or visit your first job site. The successful contractor focuses on the safety and well-being of his employees and the customers they serve.

As OSHA regulations become more restrictive and violation fines increase, non-compliance can not only cost your business hundreds of thousands of dollars, but it can also cost someone their life.

SAFETY TIP:
TRAINING IS KEY
Employers must provide training for their employees to recognize hazards to prevent falls. These efforts will also help prevent injuries and potential OSHA violation fines.
