5 Things You Need to Know About PPE for Women

According to the 2020 U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics women made up 10.9% of the total employment in the construction industry and women made up 8.1% of all fatalities in the workplace. That means having the right PPE available for women could have made all the difference.

When it comes to providing your women employees with personal protective equipment (PPE), the one-size-fits-all mentality doesn't work anymore. As the number of women entering traditionally male-dominated fields like construction, manufacturing and oil and gas grows, so do the needs for employers to provide their female employees with personal protective equipment that fits their frames.
